SUPPLEMENT

PREFACE TO SUPPLEMENT

The Hopkins name is not an uncommon one in many sections of the country. Kindred families are numerous. The lateness of the date when the original project was undertaken, 1950-54, consequently made it almost impossible to trace all the descendants of Thomas Hopkins, one of the first settlers of Providence, Rhode Island, even before Roger Williams.

A considerable quantity of correspondence developed after the distribution of Thomas Hopkins of Providence and Oyster Bay, Second Edition, 1954, to several historical and genealogical society libraries. As a result of this correspondence and further research, additional material and families have been found and data checked. This Supplement is the result of such research.

Late findings pertaining to the Hopkins name, and the ancestors of Thomas Hopkins of Providence and the second and third generations on Long Island have occasioned a complete revision of the original text on the first and second generations. The text on the William² Hopkins descendants has been considerably condensed. Just enough has been presented to show the line of descent through the fourth generation.

In the following generations sufficient details are presented to make clear the lineage of the descendants of Susanna(h),⁴ Uriah,⁴ Jonathan,⁵ Nicholas⁴ and Thomas⁶ Hopkins. Credit is due Mrs. Lois S. Elmer, Rome, New York; Mrs. Bert Biery, Ida Grove, Iowa; and Mr. Ralph L. Williams, Lapwai, Idaho.

In both sections -- the Errata and Additional Families -- the first Arabic number in the margin at the left indicates the page in Thomas Hopkins of Providence and Oyster Bay, Second Edition, 1954, where the vital data and/or text comes in proper sequence. The second number is the identification number of the individual whose name follows.

To save space and repetition, references are cited by key words or initials. The keys are given in the Bibliography, page 30.

THE HOPKINS NAME

Thomas Williams Bicknell, in The History of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Vol. 5, page 411, makes the following observation concerning the Hopkins name.

The Hopkins of New England descended from several unrelated progenitors of one of the most notable American Puritan families of that name. Rhode Island, however, has furnished to American history two of its most distinguished Revolutionary patriots in the persons of Esek Hopkins, first chief of the American navy, and his no less famous brother, Stephen Hopkins, the Rhode Island signer of the Declaration of Independence whose name says Greene is closely interwoven with all that is greatest and best in Rhode Island. . . .

The Rhode Island Hopkins . . . although no greater in numerical strength than the several New England families of the name have produced by far the greater number of historically noted ones.

The first entry of the name in English registers occurs in 1273 in the Hundred Rolls -- Nicholas Hobekyn, County Cambridge, Oxfordshire. There are also resemblances to baronical bearings of the Wyndhams of Swelcliffe, County Oxford, also the family of Oving.

ANCESTORS OF THOMAS HOPKINS IN ENGLAND

William² Hopkins was born , at Chesselbourne, Dorsetshire, England, died ; m. 1612 Joane⁶ Arnold (Nicholas,⁵ Richard,⁴ John,³ Thomas,² Roger¹), bapt. She was the daughter of Nicholas⁵ and Alice³ (John² Gully) Arnold of Westover and Ilchester, Somersetshire.

The home of William and Joane was on the north bank of the River Yeovil within sight of the church yard in Yeovilton where Joane was buried. She was the sister and foster mother of William Arnold.

The Arnold ancestry dates from early English history and includes several royal personages and nobility. Two were sureties, signers, of the Magna Carta in 1215; namely, Roger Bigod and his son Hugh. Prince Hugh Magnus, son of Henry I of France, was a Crusader. The Arnold line can be traced back to Etzelwulf (d 857), fourteenth in descent from Cedric the first of Anglo Saxon Kings. Other crowned heads were Alfred the Great, William the Conqueror, and the Scottish king, Malcom. III.

FIRST GENERATION

- 1 Thomas¹ Hopkins, son of William and Joane (Arnold) Hopkins of Yeovil, Somerset County, England, was born April 7, 1616 (St. Mary's Church record at Ilchester, England.)

Thomas Hopkins and his sister Frances are included in their uncle, William Arnold's group as given in The Arnold Memorial. William Arnold in his family record states that his "father's family arrived in New England in 1635 and came to dwell in Providence the 20th of April, 1636." Roger Williams arrived the following June.

The names of both Thomas Hopkins and Roger Williams appear with the dates of their arrival in Rhode Island in the Family Census of Massachusetts and Pawtuxet, dated Sept. 1, 1636. See Bicknell, Vol. 1, page 150. The former's name also appears in Farmer's List of the First Settlers of Rhode Island. See Narragansett Historical Register, Vol. 2, page 116.

John Osborn Austin distinguishes Thomas¹ Hopkins, a first settler, in the index of his Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island as Thomas Hopkins of Mashantatek. Hopkins located permanently a little west of the Pawtuxet, or Blackstone River, about ten miles from his home lot. See Narragansett Historical Register, Vol. 7, p. 139.

Thomas Hopkins married Elizabeth about 1648. Her family name is not definitely known. Thomas William Bicknell in The History of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, Vol. 5, pages 145 and 412 states that Thomas Hopkins married Elizabeth Arnold born in Nottinghamshire, England. However, he offers no proof. Albert Holbrook, author of Notes on one line of the Hopkins Family, reasons that this could not be correct.

At the outbreak of King Philip's War in 1675, Thomas with his daughter-in-law and her two children removed to the town of Oyster Bay, Nassau County, New York. On June 6, 1676 he was awarded land on Hog Island and was made one of its keepers. Thus he was established in Oyster Bay not later than the last mentioned date. It is thought that Elizabeth, wife of Thomas, and his third son had died or perhaps may have been killed by the Indians before the removal to Oyster Bay.

Thomas Hopkins died prior to Sept. 17, 1684, the date of a letter by Richard Kirby to William Hopkins informing him of the fact. Thomas Hopkins' death occurred while he was living on Littleworth Plantation, Musceedacove, Town of Oyster Bay, with a daughter-in-law, Elizabeth, who was then the wife of Richard Kirby. For the disposition of the estate of Thomas Hopkins, see Oyster Bay Towne Records, Vol. 1, pp. 289-90.

- 3- ii. Thomas,² b. 1650

Richard Kirby was one of the three original grantees of a tract of land on Long Island known as "Littleworth Plantation." This tract was included in the original grant to J. Carpenter from the Indians but later through lack of territorial knowledge sold to Richard Kirby, Jacob Broakin, George Downing and Robert Godfree a considerable tract in the southwest portion of the Town of Oyster Bay which was confirmed to the purchasers for a consideration by the Musketo Cove men and the Governor at New Amsterdam (New York) as shown on page 636, Vol. I, Oyster Bay Towne Records. Oyster Bay Town Records, Vol. 1, p. 630.

Joseph Carpenter admitted as copartners and equal purchasers of the Musketo Cove Lands Nathaniel Coles, Abiah Carpenter (succeeded by Daniel Coles), Thomas Townsend (succeeded by Nicholas Simkins) and Robert Coles. See Oyster Bay Town Records, Vol. 1, p. 331.

"Nicholas Simkins on January 31, 1633 acknowledged receipt of 10 pounds from Richard Kirby for the full proportion of his lands bought of ye five proprietors of Muschedacove called by ye name of Littleworth." Ibid.

Note: Musketo or Musceta Cove, changed to Glen Cove in 1834, is located in the westerly part of the Town of Oyster Bay, Nassau County on Long Island, New York. Glen Cove itself is an inlet on the eastern shore of Hempstead Bay near its outlet. The shores of the cove are flat and marshy. The original name, Musketo really meant to the Indians grassy flats, but because it was confused with mosquito, the new name was wisely adopted. See Duncan, Robert F. and Blanchard, Fessenden S. A Cruising Guide of the New England Coast.

In the Oyster Bay Town Records, Musketo is spelled in ten or more different ways. The name is spelled Mosquetah in Guide of Long Island, published by the Brooklyn Eagle in April, 1923, Vol. 36, No. 3, Serial No. 234 of the Eagle Library. This well illustrates the precarious spelling of earlier days -- by ear if you please.

In 1753, he sold the land inherited from his father and removed to Providence where he bought ninety-two acres. He sold this land to Esek Hopkins for 1,000 pounds. The house on this land served as the commodore's home until his death in 1802 and was occupied by his descendants for many years.

She was b. 1707, d. 1753, daughter of Major Sylvanus and Johanna (Jenckes) Scott (John,² Richard¹); m. 2 Anna (Arnold) Smith, daughter of Benedict Arnold (not the traitor). She was the widow of Benjamin Smith of Smithfield.

Stephen⁴ Hopkins was the most distinguished man of his generation in New England. Rhode Island never produced a man of more native ability nor a greater statesman. He was governor of the State, nine years; chancellor of Rhode Island College, twenty-four years; as a member of the committee on resolutions, reported the Articles of Confederation to the Continental Congress. Being a member of the Society of Friends, he freed his slaves and secured the passage of a law by the Rhode Island legislative body prohibiting the importation of slaves into the colony.

Children of Stephen⁴ and Sara (Scott) Hopkins:

- 27-- i. Rufus,⁵ b. 1726/7, d. 1787.

Rufus, John, Sylvanus and George were sea captains. Lydia⁶ married and left a large family. Ruth and Simon died while young. The Stephen Hopkins line was carried forward by his son Rufus.⁵
